WEBINAR ANALYSIS

Do Law Firms and Corporate Legal Departments need to invest in Legal Technology, now more than ever?

Our visual guide summarizes results and key findings of the survey conducted during a Thomson Reuters webinar that was held across the Middle East, Africa and India. The webinar is still available to watch on-demand here should you want to.

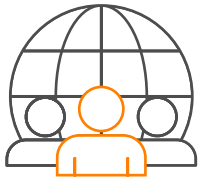

Key themes and insights

Client is King
The legal industry is seeing a shift to a client-centric model, away from the traditional lawyer-centric past.

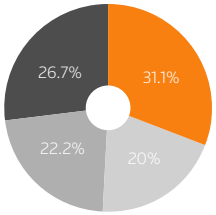

Adapt or die
The legal industry has demonstrated it's capable to adapt. In the long-term those that adopt technology will thrive.

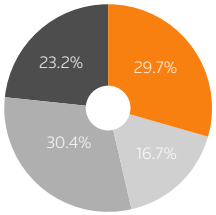

Collaboration is key
In-house lawyers need to become a fully-integrated partner of the businesses that they support.

WEBINAR'S POLL RESULTS

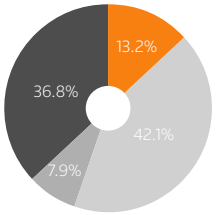

Has your firm specifically tasked anyone with the responsibility for innovation?

- Law firm - Yes
- Legal Department - Yes
- Law firm - No
- Legal Department - No

Which technologies do you think have the greatest impact?

- Artificial Intelligence
- Big Data and Analytics
- Process Automation
- Smart Contracts

Do you feel that your organization is prepared to keep pace with changes in the legal market?

- Very prepared
- Somewhat Prepared
- Prepared
- Not Prepared

In times like these, Thomson Reuters is here to help.

TR COVID-19 Resource Centre: https://connect.aem.thomsonreuters.com/covid-19

Data is gathered from polls and surveys asked during our 'Do Law Firms and Corporate Legal Departments need to invest in Legal Technology, now more than ever?' webinar on 5th May 2020.

the answer company™
THOMSON REUTERS®

WEBINAR'S TOP TAKEAWAYS

